

"Thompson Enemy of Freedom of the Press!" This is the headline carried by the Township Register (published at Niles), and the man referred to is Ira F. Thompson, candidate for associate justice of the California supreme court bench.

The charge is exact. Thompson, like a certain judge in San Francisco, has but two salient characteristics — his utter bigotry and intolerance. He has shown past any reasonable doubt that he will prosecute, to the full extent of his legal powers, any man who differs with him on political issues.

In 1926, Judge Thompson (who had only recently been appointed as superior court judge in Los Angeles) arraigned Norman H. Parks, editor of the Hollister Tribune, on a charge of contempt of court because this conscientious editor refused to stand idly by while the farmers of the Imperial valley were being dominated, in their fight for water and power rights to the Lower Colorado river, by a "county ring" determined to defeat their purpose. Parks had denounced Thompson for throwing out two-thirds of the names on a recall petition against officials who were obstructing the lobby of indignant farmers by favoring the Swing-Johnson bill, then before congress.

The San Diego Sun of Feb. 4, 1926, carries this account of Thompson's decision: "Because a libel or criminal contempt charge would entail a jury trial, Parks was charged with plain contempt. Springing to his defense were the leaders of the fight for the Swing-Johnson bill, including Assemblyman A. C. Finney, Charles Childers, partner of Congressman Phil Swing, and four others. . . . The trial lasted all day and well into the night. Judge Thompson hurried through a decision. Upon ten minutes deliberation at 10:30 p. m., he announced the young editor guilty of contempt. He was sentenced to the limit of the law—Five hundred dollars and five days in jail.

So great was the wrath of the farmers, the judge was compelled to let Parks out on $2,000 bail—the bail being raised by the farmers themselves by $1 subscriptions. Parks was flooded with telegrams from all parts of the country, urging him to continue his fight by appeal, for free speech, the right of franchise, and the Swing-Johnson bill.

Jim Bolger, editorial writer for the Scripps Howard papers, summed up the attitude of the general public in this wise: "As all self-respecting editors should, he assailed the unnamed vulture who would hurl the farmers of Imperial (valley) and Editor Parks into the All-American canal, if such an action would close the matter forever. . . . Blackstone, consider him. He dared to write what he believed. He mantled no lie with a cloak of editorial deceit. . . . Fie, fie on the court, Blackstone, if he cannot stand criticism. It shows a weak spot. . . .

IMPROVEMENTS ON LOCAL ROADS START THIS WEEK

Actual construction work on two roadways of this vicinity was under way today after almost a week of surveying and general preparations had been completed under the direction of County Surveyor Robert B. Chandler.

Casey road has just recently been graded between the San Jose-Los Gatos highway and the Los Gatos creek, and a macadam layer spread over the gravel base. This represented the completion of the first phase in plans for road improvement in this section.

The other two projects are the paving of all of Williams road and of a considerable portion of Payne avenue between the San Tomas creek and Saratoga avenue. A. J. Raisch company, contractors, are managing the job.

Prout-De Selle Nuptials to be Event of Friday

An event of exceptional interest to Campbell's younger set will be the marriage this Friday evening of Miss Anna Louise Prout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Prout of Central avenue, to Stanley De Selle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles De Selle of Second street. They will be wedded at St. Paul's Methodist church in San Jose by the Rev. James Andrew.

Miss Prout and Mr. DeSelle have long been popular with Campbell's younger circle, having graduated from Campbell high school with special prominence and continued actively in local social events during the succeeding years. Mr. DeSelle is associated with the San Jose Farmers' Union.

Miss Prout was recently feted at a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Anita Maynard of Willow Glenn. Those in attendance were: Mrs. O. Strom, Mrs. Anna Moreland, Mrs. Clara Quirk, Mrs. Aud-

Valley Water Co. Lays 3,400 Feet Irrigation Pipe

Extension of the irrigation possibilities in this region was given notable impetus this week when the laying of 3400 feet of irrigation pipe along Dry Creek road was begun yesterday, according to W. Finmore, president of the Santa Clara valley water company. The cost for the program is estimated at $3000.

The work on the project will be done entirely by hand labor, Mr. Finmore said, owing to the fact that the right of way for the pipe line carries through orchards, and the digging machinery might despoil trees and crops. There will be 18 inches of clearance above the pipes when they are laid.

In sympathy with the policy of winter irrigation favored by the Santa Clara valley water conservation project, the water flowing through the tar-covered 16 and 24 inch main will be supplied to the orchardists only during the winter season. The company, organized in 1849, owns dams on the Los Gatos creek, and in the winter time is enabled to divert considerable water from the creek to orchard areas.

LOS GATOS CLUBSTERS HURL CHALLENGE AT LOCAL KIWANIS

A high flung challenge to local Kiwanians was received from the Los Gatos club last Tuesday in which a bout of versatility, including bridge, golf, and baseball, was proposed, the only condition being that the loser must fete the winner with a dinner and entertainment. The Campbell group accepted the challenge promptly, and began to organize committees at once to complete the plans for the project.

HOLLISTER NINE WALLOPS LOCAL BASEBALL TEAM

A rather pathetic comedy of errors was enacted before a modest gathering of baseball fanatics last Sunday when the Hollister nine outburlesqued Campbell's "championship" team to make a dynamic 16 to 1 entrance into Campbell's long series of uninterrupted triumphs. The game was played on the Hollister diamond.

Behind five innings of creditable performance on the part of Quinn, the Campbell conquistadores contrived to lay up a host of errors, totaling 16 in the grand, and Hollister trooped in with five scores before the game was much over half finished. From thence on it was merely a dubious wager as to whether Campbell could retire the (Continued on Page Four)

Canneries Start Season's Major Operations Mon.

Two of the three Campbell packing plants swung into their major season operations Monday as sizeable arrivals of peaches and pears were announced at the Drew Packing company and the Campbell packing corporation.

The Drew cannery announced that it would not begin work until the latter part of the week owing to hindrance to shipping activities consequent upon the strike. Several carloads of peaches were delayed yesterday, according to Mr. Campodonico, plant manager, and the arrival of others remained somewhat uncertain at the present time, he said.

The Drew plant has recently installed new machinery in both the peach and pear cutting departments which will eliminate expenditure of considerable labor-power. All machinery was leased from Anderson and Barngrover, San Jose manufacturers.

Similarly equipped is the Campbell Packing corporation, formerly Hyde's cannery. At capacity this plant will hire in the neighborhood of 150 men, was the announcement yesterday from cannery officials. It had not yet been decided whether a double shift would be employed there.

C. C. Young Raps Merriam As Tool Of Power Trusts

San Francisco, July 18—Declaring that Acting Governor Frank F. Merriam's record while a member of the legislature stamped him as a servant of the "billion dollar lobby" of the public utilities that opposed the King tax bill in 1921 former Governor C. C. Young struck sharply at Merriam in a statement here today. At the same time Young paid his respects to John R. Quinn, another of his opponents who has been campaigning on a platform against the power interests.

After speaking of what he declares to be Quinn's "conversion" to this position, Young states:

"To the best of my knowledge I am personally acquainted with only one utility or 'power trust' executive and I am reliably informed that he is strongly behind Mr. Quinn."

Young's statement in full is as follows:

"As lieutenant governor I had much to do with directing the fight for the King tax bill, which made the tax burden of the public utilities equal the burden of the ordinary taxpayer. Others who battled valiantly for this bill were Governor Stephens, former Governor Pardee, and Clyde L. Seavey of the state board of control. In favor of the bill were all the progressive members of the legislature, many of whom had served from the time of Governor Johnson.

"The bill was strongly resisted by public utility interests, and was bitterly fought by what became known as the 'billion dollar lobby.' According to the constitution a two-thirds vote of each house was necessary to increase public utility tax rates and, after the most stormy of all legislative fights, the bill was passed without a single vote to spare. One more member against it in either senate or assembly would have defeated it, and the public utility corporations would have escaped their just burden of taxation.

"In this campaign I am avoiding all personalities as far as my opponents are concerned. However, a public record is not a personality, and it is only fair to point out that both as assemblyman and as member of the revenue and taxation committee, Acting Governor Merriam obviously obeyed the dictates of the billion dollar lobby, since he worked and voted against the bill and the interests of the people. This vote was the initial act that has cost him the support of all progressive voters—a support which in this progressive year would seem absolutely essential to any successful candidate in the November election.

"Incidentally, while on this subject I should like to say a word respecting another opponent, John R. Quinn, who is posing as the only simon-pure believer that public utility corporations have no business in politics or in the control of the legislature for their own private ends.

"While congratulating Mr. Quinn on his conversion to this view, I respectfully invite him to point out a single instance where this has not been precisely my stand, and should like to remind him of the old adage that 'actions speak louder than words.' I am willing to match my 25 years of performance against his very eloquent protestations. As a matter of fact, to the best of my knowledge I am personally acquainted with only one public utility or 'power trust' executive, and I am reliably informed that he is strongly behind Mr. Quinn."

Merchants Meet At Santa Clara

The Campbell branch of the Merchant's Association of Santa Clara, headed by Dan Clark, met with the central council of that body last Friday in Santa Clara.

Means for improving credit extension and collection, and promoting community projects of various types, were discussed there under the leadership of George Cracknell, secretary-manager of the central body.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Battee entertained at an ingenious picnic lunch last Wednesday, which was held in the cutting shed of their fruit drier. The guests were Mrs. Edwin Howes, Mrs. E. H. Todd, Mrs. Milton G. Francis, Mrs. Grace Faria, Misses Maria Lewis, Eleanor Hendricks, Dorothy Todd, and

A. A. THIELKE PUBLISHES BOOK

A. A. Thielke, director of music at the Campbell schools, edited and published a book in orchestration for beginners recently which was received very favorably in music circles.

Finding virtually all the available orchestration text unsatisfactory for use in the tutelage of beginning students, Mr. Thielke decided to write his own musical scores, made his own mimeograph stencils, and published his own book. The book gave special attention to scores for stringed instruments, which Mr. Thielke declared to have been particularly unsatisfactory for young students.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

Even with the most drastic economy program possible, the 1935 state legislature, on convening at Sacramento in January, will face the unhappy necessity of levying additional taxes for the support of state government.

That fact stands out clearly and inescapably in all the tangle of post-depression governmental finance. Only a miracle, or at least a rapid and substantial upturn in business, bringing with it a return to normal revenues, could close the present gap between income and outgo. And even a sudden swing-back to prosperity would fail to wipe out the huge deficit in the state's general fund.

There are two questions of primary importance to the taxpayer in weighing the problem:

First, "Who will pay the bill?" "What sources will the state tap for new revenues?"

And second, "What will the bill total?" "How much must be raised in new taxes?"

Inquiring into the requirements for new revenues first, the present state deficit totals about $31,000,000. To this must be added $65,000,000, due to the shifting of utility property next year to county tax rolls and the loss of this revenue to the state. And to this must be added approximately $20,000,000—the estimated shortage in present income to meet estimated expenditures of the coming biennium. If it is desired to consider the outlook at its worst, there must still be added to this some $17,500,000 in arbitrary increases for schools, social service and capital improvements for hospitals, prisons, etc.

The grand total—or staggering total, if considered from the taxpayer's standpoint—is $133,500,000! And even the most ruthless slashing of state expenditures, with the elimination of all improvements and the drastic curtailment of services under the legislature's control, would still leave the total well over the $100,000,000 mark! "Fixed charges," voted by the people and subject to reduction only by a new vote of the people, would effectively block any further reduction.

Where, then, will California legislators look for $100,000,000?

One of the first suggestions heard in many quarters, but with public sentiment concerning it yet unknown, is that the current deficit of $31,000,000 be canceled by a state bond issue, rather than new taxes—the bonds to carry a low rate of interest and to be retired over a period of 15 or 20 years. This plan would pass a part of the burden on to posterity, or at least a new generation.

And to raise the remaining $70,000,000 in new revenues for the coming two year period there are almost as many schemes as millions—but with no unanimity of opinion as yet on any one plan.

Various proposals to tax "hard liquor" are under consideration, for example, but the yield from this source would probably not exceed more than $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 per biennium.

Still another suggestion—but one which would be certain to bring a heated battle—is a state income tax, projected on the theory that it would place a tax on wealth to balance the present sales tax, which is carried largely by taxpayers of moderate income. Such a tax would probably not raise more than $12,000,000 per biennium.

FOR A THIRSTY SUMMER

IT isn't necessary for a man or woman, boy or girl, to go "somewhere East of Suez" to raise a thirst in summer. Our American summers always provide us with thirsts which we can contemplate with great satisfaction, as a nation, when we are comparing them with other thirsts. In fact our American summers have done more than that, for invention has followed our need, and we have a greater variety of delicious thirst quenching drinks in this country than in any other in the world.

It may be our more liberal use of ice that has enabled us to do this, but, on the other hand, it is equally likely to be our more liberal use of all sorts of delicious ingredients, each one of which lends its special flavor to a concoction so that tastes of every sort can be pleased and all thirsts assuaged. At any rate, here are some of the best of them, which have not only been carefully tested by a graduate dietitian, but won't do you any harm because they are not of the kind Kipling had in mind when he advised that trip to the Far East, but temperance drinks, every one of them.

Tomato Drinks

No other country has made as much use of the tomato as this one in making delicious and healthful drinks. Here are a couple of the latest variations on straight tomato juice:

Sparkling Tomato Beverage: Add the juice of one lemon, one tablespoon sugar and salt to taste to the contents of two 10-ounce cans of tomato juice, and have very cold. Add half a pint of ice cold charged water, and serve at once in small glass cups. This will make six cups.

Tomatoade: Heat two cups of strained tomato juice, or the contents of a 15-ounce can, and one-fourth cup sugar to boiling to dissolve the sugar. Add one-fourth cup lemon juice and one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, and chill. Serve very cold in cocktail glasses. Serves six.

Plums and Apricots

Many fruits have been called upon to assuage the fever of our summer thirsts. Here are two recipes in which plums and apricots play their parts:

Irish Flipp: Boil one cup sugar and one cup water for a few minutes, tint with green coloring, and cool. Add the contents of a No. 2½ can of green gage plums, pressed through a sieve, one-half cup fresh lime juice and two pints charged water. Serve with ice, and garnish with a sprig of mint and a green cherry. Makes nine cups.

Golden Goblet: Steep one teaspoon tea in one cup boiling water for two minutes, and strain. Add four tablespoons sugar, and cool. Press the contents of an 8-ounce can of apricots through a sieve, and add with one cup orange juice and four tablespoons lemon juice. Serve over crushed ice with a garnish of sliced orange. Makes three cups.

Pineapple, Of Course

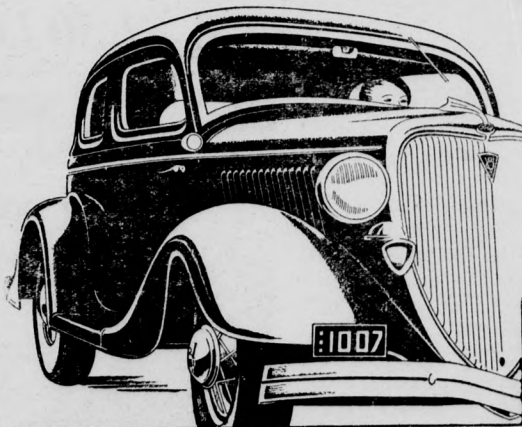

The drinks made of pineapple juice are legion. A good summer egg nog is made with it in this way.

Pineapple Egg Nog: Put two eggs, two tablespoons sugar and the contents of two 12-ounce cans pineapple juice into a cocktail shaker or jar, add cracked ice, and shake until well mixed and frothy. Serve with a sprinkling of nutmeg on top. Makes four and a half cups.

Hawaiian Chocolate Drink: Boil together one 13-ounce can of chocolate syrup, two and a half cups water, and four tablespoons sugar for three or four minutes. Add one cup thin cream or evaporated milk, and chill. Add the contents of a 12-ounce can of pineapple juice, and pour over crushed ice. This makes six cups. If you like, shake it in a jar or cocktail shaker.

Fruit Beer: Dissolve one-third cup confectioner's sugar in one and a half cups fruit syrups (peach, grapefruit, etc.) and three tablespoons lemon juice. Beat one egg white stiff, and pour fruit juices over, beating constantly. Pour on two pints ice cold ginger ale, and serve at once over cracked ice. This makes eight tall or sixteen punch glasses.*

A FEW FORD V-8 Safety Features

TO HANDLE easily and surely at all speeds, a car must be built for safe performance from the ground up. Not only strength but weight must be considered. . . . The elimination of useless DEAD-WEIGHT makes a car easier to handle, safer to drive—and much less expensive to operate.

In the Ford V-8 you have a car in which strength beyond the needs of safety was a basic principle of design. Deadweight has been eliminated—not at the expense of safety. Just the opposite! Where weight has been cut (as in the all-steel body), SAFETY has been increased. Ask your nearest Ford dealer to let you drive a Ford V-8—in traffic, or where you will. See for yourself how surely it handles, how quickly it brakes, how safely it holds the road even at top speed.

The Hon. Jackson Ralston addressed the ladies' night session of the Campbell Kiwanis club yesterday evening on the subject of Hitler and Germany. Herbert M. Shadle occupied the chair.

Harvey Wood, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wood, entertained at the piano, as did his teacher, Miss Katherine Wood of McCoy Avenue.

The ladies' night—"which means your wife or what have you"—went off very nicely.

Famous Adventurers

by Hank

LEIF ERICSON

Eric the Red, famous old Viking, of whom many tales of daring and adventurous conquest have been handed down through centuries of story tellers, had two sons, one was called Thorstein, and the other Leif. Of Thorstein, little has been told, since he developed into a "thin youth with black hair and a sallow complexion," and, according to historians, took little interest in the harder pursuits of his sturdy-limbed brother.

Haunting the busy seaport where strange tales of the mysterious ocean were popular among the bold Viking sailors, young Leif began to wonder and dream of the day when he would sail toward the West and discover for himself the solution to the many mysteries.

He was still a very young man when the opportunity finally came and at the head of a crew of thirty staunch adventurers, he set sail from the little town of Brathalid in Greenland, in the year 1,000 A.D. Their first landfall was somewhere near Newfoundland, from whence they sailed southward, following the coast line to a place near the Charles river where several rude huts were built and the adventurers lived for several months, exploring, hunting and fishing. From the profusion of wild grapes found there they called the land Vinland. And so it is to Leif Ericson that we must give credit as the first European to tread American shores, and not Columbus.

that the law?

"Indeed, Blackstone, you said 'that the king can do no wrong.'"

"But you referred to a fundamental principle of the English law—and this is the United States!"

So much for Ira F. Thompson, who is opposed only by one other candidate—Charles Edward Acret, prominent Los Angeles attorney. Acret is described by Parks as "a clean, able man, and above all, a tolerant one."

You will have your choice on the ballot as between Thompson and Acret.

Tucker, manager of the exchange.

This statement made in the form of a report to the Directors of the Exchange stated that when the announcement was made that as much as $60 a ton would be advanced to members of the organization to meet harvesting costs, a representative of a New York financial firm called and offered to loan on the unsecured note of the Exchange on a short-term basis one million dollars at one per cent.

This offer has been declined on the ground that the usual sources of credit available in California are ample for any loans that the organization might require.

Manager Tucker reported that when the representative of the New York firm was asked why his offer should be made, he stated it was a problem for his institution to place its money safely on short-term loans and that the accommodation to the Exchange for harvest expenses and advances on delivery was con-

In the meantime, Hollister showed very notable affection for the deliveries of Quain, Jung and Filice, and the ravenous bats of the home team were only appeased after 15 very lusty and solid blows had been recorded on the score sheet. Hollister tallied at least sidered a highly safe method for putting this money to work.

On the Sunday coming, however, "Spec" Clark will be back in the box, and the management promises that the game with the Santa Clara C.

Y. O.'s will have an altogether different finale. He will be opposed by Al Frietas of the Tony Cantell roster.

In regard to the unannounced cancellation of the Rosicrucian Press game two weeks ago, the Campbell manager wishes to offer his apologies for the disappointment which resulted. He declares that he was not notified by the opposing team of their intention to cancel the game until Sunday morning, and that it was then too late to prevent the crowd from gathering.
